Egypt says: Israel overproducing Sinai oil

CAIRO, Sept. 2 (AP) - Israel is heavily overproducing oil wells which it is slated to return to Egypt in three months. Oil Minister Ahmad Ezzedine Hilal said Sun-

In a statement to the Middle East News Agency, Hilal said the Israelis are pumping out almost double the amount of oil the wells can sustain for prolonged life.

The wells, in a site offshore from Sinai known as the Alma Field, were developed by Israel after it occupied the peninsula in 1967. Under the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, they are to be handed over to Egypt Nov. 25.

Vance may discuss with Gromyko issue of soldiers in Cuba

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (R) - U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance may raise American concern about Soviet troops in Cuba with Soviet Foreign Minister Adrei Gromyko when the two meet at the United Nations General Assembly later this month. U.S. officials said Saturday.

One official said it would be common sense for the issue to come up if the matter is not resolved by then.

The State Department said Friday it had evidence that between 2,000 and 3,000 Soviet combat troops were in Cuba and said Washingron had voiced serious concern about the presence.

Cuba has not commented officially on the claims but Cuhan officials have privately dismissed them as a fantasy.

First, he said, the figures show a substantial drop in the Vietnamese exodus since the fleet was deployed in late July after the United Nations conference on refugees in Geneva. He hoped Hanoi would make the temporary reduction in the exodus a permanent halt.

"I personally believe one of the best things our government has done in a long time is to simply do the human thing and use our skilled military sailors and pilots to seek them out, find them, help them — and we've saved a lot of lives," Mondale said.

But Peter Willey, recalled after three years absence from Test cricket, helped in an unfinished stand of 52.

Io county games, Derek Uoderwood, Kent's 34-year-nid former England spinner took eight Glamorgan wickets for 88 runs, including the last five wickets without conceding a run.

Australian Mick Malooe, 22, claimed seven Nottinghamshire wickets for 88 runs, including those of England Test batsman Derek Randall and big-hitting South African Clive Rice in successive Overs.

Gloucestershire's two Pakistani players, Sadiq Muhammad and Zaheer Abbas, batted profitably against Warwickshire. Zaheer hit 151 oot out, and Sadiq made 66.

THE NONALIGNED MEETING

The leaders of the world's oonaligned states, some eighty-four nations comprising around two billions of the world population, are to meet in Havana this third of September. They would be forgiven, as they reflect on their gathering, a sense of frustration or even bitter irony, when they compare the vast chunk of the world they represent with their actual influence oo the international scene.

The movement of nonaligned nations was founded to provide a counterweight for the influence of the Eastern and Western hlocs, in their division of world power. Yet with time, hardly more than name remains of the older hopes. The movement is in decay, with most of its members occupied with struggles among and within themselves; with pressures to fall under the influence of this or that camp taking their toll; with the emergence of the two superpowers and the even narrower concentration of world power into their hands.

The long march of the movement from the first brave hopes of the 1955 meeting in Bandung to the present passed through many stages. Yet it is certain that it never lived a period of vigour equal to that beginning. In 1961, it had its first summit meeting, affirming the independence of the participants in the face of the escalating Cold War between the world giants. The second met in Cairo in 1964, with President Nasser among its leading lights. In the second half of the 1960s the movement passed one of its lowest phases, as a result of the Arab-Israeli war and the changes in Latin America. The 1970 meeting was held in the absence of both Nasser and Nehru from the scene. It is arguable that their demise was the hardest blow the movement suffered.

The fourth and fifth meetings in 1973 and 1976 marked the beginning of a new, slightly more hopeful phase. The dangers to the movement's present unity of purpose bas not dented its leaders' determination to preserve it and inject it with new blood.

One thing to note on the march from Bandung to Havana. At the beginning and well into the middle phase of the movement, Egypt, especially Nasser's Egypt, was instrumental in getting it going. Sadat's Egypt at present is aiding its process of decay, through the divisive separate peace Sadat is pursuing with the Israelis.

The Somali return to democracy

By Farouk Luqman

JEDDAH -Ninety nine per cent of the eligible Somali voters have apparently approved of the constitution drawn up by the government to signal the return of democratic rule to their country. While such extremely high percentages and voter tumouts have become rightly suspect in the Arab world - especially when they are quoted to support the re-election of a military dictator - they should he taken seriously this time for one good reason. The majority of the Somalis are fed up with military rule which they have had since 1969 when army commander Siad Barre staged a coup d' e at - then very much in vogue in Africa — and overthrew the democratic government of President Abdul Rashid Shermarke and his popular Premier Muhammad Ihrahim Egal.

The Somalis had been independent from both Britain and Italy since 1960 and, until the coup, the country had been a model of democratic rule in Africa. They had a lively and free press, a fearless judiciary and a popularly elected parliament whose members basked in the sun of Westminster-type dehates and question times.

Unfortunately, the administration was somewhat corrupt and foreign aid from the West and the Arab world was measly. Prolonged droughts com-pounded the misery of the farmers and shepherds on whom the country depended for foreign exchange earnings.

The army struck in a much-vaunted bid to end all that and usher in a period of economic prosperity. Barre was at first welcomed heartily in the hope that he would eliminate corruption and intensify the search for foreign aid.

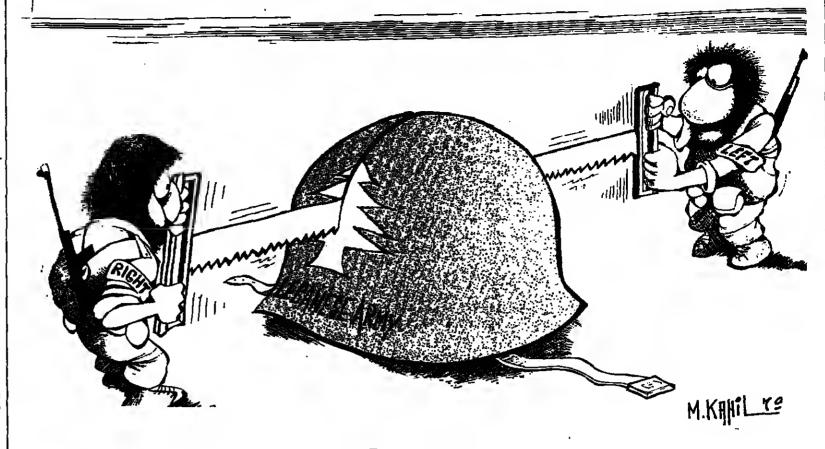

But, while Barre eliminated corruption, he also made the fatal mistake of imposing socialism on an unwilling and staunchly Muslim people who detested nationalizations and the influx of Soviet and Cuban personnel who followed in the wake of so-called "scientific socialism."

To make up for lack of support for its domestic policies, the government, which really meant a combination of the army and the sole ruling party, lonked for help in foreign policy. It joined the Arah League and launched a costly campaign to regain its lost territories in Ethiopia, the former French Somaliland, and the Kenyan-ruled North Fronder District ceded by the British government to the then Crown Colony of Kenya.

Barre nearly retrieved the Ethiopian-controlled Ogaden hut he did not reckon with Soviet pride and their long-term commitment to Mengistu Mariam of Ethiopia. The Soviets brought in Cuhans to turn the Somali ode and then let the Ethiopians raid Somall cities by way of additional bumiliation. Since then Barre's star in the country has been in a state of partial eclipse.

With the economy in a shambles, the army demoralized and the people disillusioned, a way out bad to be found and the logical one was a promise to restore democracy which the Somalis still eherished and longed for. Hence the considerable turnout in favor of a return to parliamentary life and, presumably, to a free press and judiciary which is beyond the reach of the executive branch.

It was therefore quite refreshing ment, particularly a military dictatorship, to admit publicly that ninety nine per cent of the people did not want it to remain in office and would rather be ruled by their own directly elected representatives. For all his mistakes, this means Barre will be remembered for having been one of the rare breed of military rulers who have willingly relinquished power in favor of the people. That is, provided that the constitution is carried out and democracy is restored on a sound basis - and quickly too.

Rolling on the river with Jimmy

By Anthony Holden

ST LOUIS -'It has nothing this-worldly about it, nothing to hang a threat or a worry upon,' wrote Mark Twain of the Vississippi River. 'It is always as tranquil and reposeful as dreamland,"

It wasn't last week. With what wild surmise would Huckleberry Finn have surveyed the scene as the President of the United States dropped by to solicit his vote? The Jimmy Carter re-election bandwagon, he might well have thought, keeps on rollin' along.

It was supposed to be a vacacion, if any normal human being spends his summer bolidays making six speeches a day, kissing habies, shaking thousands of hands, holding public meetings and radio phone-ins, then it was a vacadon, Jimmy Carter chose to spend his week off this summer sailing through the three states holding crucial early primaries next year.

A few months ago, some 140 normal buman beings did book themselves a pleasant summer vacation - sailing the 700 majestic miles of the Mississippi from St. Paul to St. Louis aboard an ancient sternwheel paddle-boat, The Delta Queen, Among them were the John Bakers and the John Works of St. Paul, two friendly couples sharing a retirement

Two weeks ago, having shelled out $ 980 per person on their 'second boneymoons', the Bakers and the Works learned that they had been pitched out of their grade A cabins. Fifteen other couples were ebucked off the boat altogether. They were making way for the President, his wife and daughter, a 'skeleton' White House staff of 30, and a rotating daily pool of eight Washington journalists.

Those left aboard the Queen enjoyed a somewhat disrupted week away from it all. The boat made many an unscheduled stop along the way so that the man in cahin 339 could seize the newlyinstalled public address system and cry to the crowd on the river bank: 'Don't you think we live in a great country? Together, we can make it even greater.

Will you help me? Thank you. I love you. From a distance the Delta Queen looked a truly romantic vision: the last of the old Mississippi paddle-steamers, stars and stripes flying, the steam organ belting out 'Old Man River', 'Dixie' and other such appropriate golden oldies, the giant rear. wheel eburning through the placid sheen of the mile-wide river.

When it approached the river bank, however, the atmosphere changed. The caliope, still endearingly out of tune, began to play 'God Bless America'. The Stars and Stripes', even 'Hail to the Chief'. On the white wood-frame roof stood those sharpsuited men in dark glasses, equipped with walkietalkies, giant hinoculars and bulging hips. Large hullet-proof cars gathered on the quay.

Bullying coastguard patrol boats kept the accompanying flotilla at hay. Three hundred yards minimum distance bellowed the tannoy. Mister, will you move your boat away, or shall we?"

Fierce sunlight alternated with thunderous rain as the slight, familiar figure edged along the walkway to the micropbone. Hello, Keokuk, Iowa. Thank you for coming to greet us today. We've got the greatest country in the world, and if you'll help

Carter was at it night and day. Advance launches checked the size of waiting crowds to see if they were worth an unscheduled stop. Most nights the publicity people would get him out of bed to shout a passing greeting to a gaggle of the curious grass-roots. This is a non-partisan trip, be insisted, People have come out to see the President, not Jimmy

It was tempting to agree, if only because it was hard to believe that this grinning, rain-soaked figure in T-shirt, blue jeans and sneakers was the son, I love ya' shrilled his disembodied, singsong voice through the gathering darkness. Could this be the leader of the free world? The first morning, he was up jogging - as usual

- at 6.30 am. There were for the first and only time, complaints from the other passengers, rudely awakened from their holiday sleep. Thereafter, the President stopped the boat, stripped down and went ashore at dawn each day to run his statutory five miles in 35 minutes - faster, he told his doctor, than he could manage when running for his naval college a generation ago

At 54, Carter was one of the youngest passengers aboard. Mississippi riverboat rides, for some reason, are the preserve of senior citizens, which means that the entertainment aboard the Delta Queen consists of checkers, hingo, whist drives and singsongs. The President, by all accounts, proved a Daughter Amy, however, joined in with a will, rganizing the few other children on board, and kicking up a fuss when the purser refused to call back for her the one library copy of Tom Sawyer,

The First Lady, Rosalynn Carter, seemed even less on holiday than the President, seizing the microphone from him when he ran out of platitudes, and delaying the hoat for two hours in Burlington, Lowa, so she could have her hair done.

Her husband, to beguile the time, went fishing again - and returned, as be did every day, emptyhanded. "I'm a better President than I am a fisherman,' he declared to the citizens of Burlington, a straw-poll of whom appeared to think this a matter for debate. Carter had been addressing them on the subject of his energy campaign, the official pretext for the trip - which meant that the taxpayer, rather than the President or the Democratic Party, was footing the hill. 'Yes, Amy's violin-playing has improved and 'no, there is no more beautiful countryside in America than you folks have here' were typical answers to questions on the oil shortage. Palestine and its place in the growing Middle East crisis seemed far, far away as the detested but inescapable Washington press corps kept plying him with questions about the real world. What, for about Ambassador Robert Strauss's illbumored return from his abortive talks in Jerusalem and Cairo? 'You'd better ask the Vice-President about that.' We welcome President Carter,' said the Quad

City Times, as did every newspaper along his route. But, to put it bluntly, we wish he had remained in Washington. There is much to be done there."

Back aboard the Delta Queen , 1980 around the next corner, Jimmy Carter played ehopsticks on the callope as the Lebanon burned. - (OFNS)

No bed of roses at Rhodesia summit

By David Martin

LUSAKA -The difficulties facing the Rhodesian constitution conference beginning in London on September 10 have been highlighted and somewhat exacerbated by a series of events in the past two weeks, The latest of these are the Rhodesian raids, presumably sanctioned by Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa, on seven camps in Zambia.

The Rhodesians say that the attacks were on guerrilla hases. Zambia says they were refugee camps. But irrespective of these claims and counter-claims the raids can only serve to harden the attitudes of the leader of the Zimbahwe African People's Union (ZAPU), Joshua Nkomo, on the eve of the London meeong.

Muzorewa's decision to include his predecessor. Ian Smith, in his delegation for London poses further difficulties. Britain, while insisting it was not exerting pressure on the Muzorewa to exclude Smith, was quietly telling him that Smith's presence in London would be unhelpful.

The Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, the five African frontline States and, the indications are, Britain itself, are insistent that an internationally acceptable independent constitution cannot leave the reality of power in the hands of the white minor-

The present Zimbabwe Rhodesia constitution, described by Commonwealth leaders as 'defective' does just that. Smith's 28 Rhodesian Front parliamentarians can block any major constitutional change and control of the army, police, civil service and judiciary remains with the white minority.

Correcting these defects is one of the principal tasks of the London conference. But Smith and the second Rhodesian Front member of the hishop's 12-man team, Finance Minister David Smith, can be expected to fight to retain entrenched white

Even if Muzorewa and his fellow black delegates reach agreement with the Patriotic Front on a new constitution it is difficult to see how the Bishop can get it endorsed in the Zimhabwe Rhodesia Parliament unless Smith and his fellow whites are con-

The third difficulty in the past few days arises from the statement of the Patriotic Front co-leaders Nkomo and Robert Mugabe following their meeting in Dar-es-Salaam last week. While accepting that 'the process of achieving an acceptable constitudonal agreement is necessarily a movement from war to peace' and accepting the invitation to the London meeting, the Patriotic Front rejects some of the proposals made by Britain.

Their statement said that the guerrilla alliance rejected the proposed constitutional framework made public a fortnight ago hy Whiteball. They said that Britain was unacceptable as an 'impartial' force to supervise elections, that parliamentary seats reserved for minorities on basis of colour was repugnant to the principles of democracy' and the Patriotic Front also rejected Britain's suggestion of a ceasefire during the conference.

The optimistic view in diplomatic circles and among senior frontline officials is that the statement represents little more than preconference posturing. Hard, seemingly inflexible, positions are heing struck. But once the conference begins greater flexihility will be shown.

On one of the rejected points there may be merit in this view. In private, senior Patriotic Front officials indicate greater flexibility on the question of reserved seats for whites. But they stress that they find the concept both racially and genuinely repug-

But on the questions of a ceasefire before the outcome of a successful conference and Britain's 'impartiality' as the elections supervisor there is no discernible flexibility

The Front points out that in 1977 during the Anglo-American inidative Britain requested (and the Patriooc Front accepted) United Nations supervision of elections. They also insist that they and the Anglo-Americans agreed during the same negodations that the existing Rhodesian forces must be 'dismantled'.

The rejection of Britain's proposed constitutional framework on the grounds that it is based on the Zimbabwe-Rhodesia consotution, may not prove to be too serious.

In the first place Britain's proposals deviate considerahly from the Zimbabwe-Rhodesia consotution on several critical points. And secondly there are bound to be common themes in any constitution no matter how one views it.

Britain had proposed that an attempt should be made to agree upon a new constitution in phase one of the London conference. In phase two, the administration and the question of law and order during the transition preceding the elections would

This is categorically rejected by the PF. It is unreal, they argue, to rry to deal with the problems of war-torn Zunhabwe as if it was a perfectly normal decolonization exercise as if the war was not taking place at all. - OFNS)

Newspapers Sunday focussed on King Khaled's trip to Geneva. and his airport meeting with North Yemeni Assembly Speaker Sheikh Ahdullah Al-Ahmar before leaving. They also reported the arrival in Taif of a Lebanese envoy with a message for the King from President Sarkis. Other items given prominence were Yugoslav President Tito's notifying PLO Chairman Arafat of the success of his mediation with Washington, a Palestinian leader criticizing President Carter's statements on Palestinian statehood, the United States' encouragement of Rumania to arrange secret talks between Syria and Israel, a new Baath (Resurrection) party established in Israel, the meeting of Gulf oil ministers in Kuwait this month, Iranian Premier Bazargan tendering his resignation to protest Khomeini's policies, and the Ugandan government's adoption of stringent security measures to meet a deteriorating security situ-

In its editorial. Okaz stressed that Jimmy Carter was following the same policy towards the Palestinian problem charted, long ago, as he himself recently admitted, by his predecessors.

Dwelling on U.S. efforts to prompt Rumania to arrange secret talks between Syria and Israel, it said that, " talk or no lalk, the resolution of the Mideast oroblem resided in the understanding of its nature. The problem is a comprehensive one that could not be solved on the basis of separate, bilateral talks. First of all, Israel must withdraw from territory it invaded in 1967. It must also recognize the Palestinian people's legitimate rights, foremost among which are their right to determine their own future and to statebood. Israel must bow before the will of world public opinion which bad understood the justness of the Palestinian struggle and recognized that the Palestine Liberation Organization was the sole, legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

"World public opinion also must admit that the Arab countries have done all what they could for peace, while insisting on the recovery of their rights and shrines. Hence they will keep striving until such rights were re-established," the paper said.

It is only this very understanding which could conduce to peace in the area, the paper concluded. Al-Medina issued a scathing attack against the holding of the nonaligned conference in Cuba. It recalled B U.S. State Department Statement to the effect that a two to three thousand troop Soviet brigade was now in Cuba. The Soviet soldiers were to replace their Cuban comrades recently dispatched to Africa, Southern Arabia and other regions on com-the anger and resentment of most of the nonaligned states caused by the Cuban proposal of a resolution that would place the whole movement in the Soviet orbit.

The editorialist underlined that the nonaligned movement was born al a time Third World countries had just or were about to free themselves from the shackles of colonialism. "The Communist camp then tried to pose as the champion of independence. But the newly independent states did not take long to discover that Soviet and Western colonialist aims did not differ much. It proved even more greedy. Al -Jazirah expressed its optimism about peace prospects in the Middle East, now that intensive efforts to win over international, recognition of the legiomacy of Palestinian rights were topping the news everywhere. It congratulated itself that Zionist efforts to kill the-pro-Palestinian trend which, though followed by the United States for a time, led to the ousting of that country's U.S. ambassador, had reached a dead end.

Al -Riyadh editorial lambasted

Egyptian Premier Mustafa Khalil for what it termed a shameful declaration calling upon the Palestinian resistance to abandon all arms and present the world with a picture of a defenseless people seeking justice. The newspaper said Khalil's statement followed " the logic of angels in a society of devils." What happened to the conscienses of the Americans and the Europeans and the Jews when Israeli warplanes devastated Egyptian schools killing bundreds of defenseless children before they turned their full wrath on the Palestinian refugees in their tent camps?" the paper inquired.

"Where is that international conscience and righteous indignation that he is talking about now that Israeli warplanes are massacring civilians in southern Lebanon?

This kind of "academic imperialism," fueled by the all-too-cosy relationship between Middle East specialists and government agencies, was the ultimate target of our conspirators in Cairo.

These young rebels hatched a modest plot to produce a "Journal of Arab Studies," a publication free from the control of the great academic institutions of the West which would provide a forum for objective, original research into the politics and society of the Arab Unfortunately, the project died still-born, for lack of funds. But the desire to free Western universities from the shackles of "Orientalism" lived on.

These young academics, and others like them, have gone on to teach at various universities in America and Europe. And for the most part they have lived up to their personal commitment to open up the field of Middle East studies, to pursue a rational and objective inquiry into the peoples and politics of the region, free from the prejudices and distored frameworks of traditional "Oriental' scholarship.

This new breed of Western Middle East scholars is still a minority, but at least it has begun to make a dent in the Orientalist monopoly of the field.

One of the best of these new scholars is Peter Gran, assistant professor of history at the University of Texas at Austin. His latest work, "Islamic Roots of Capitalism," is a good example of what can be done in the field of Arab studies if a scholar commits himself to studying his subject on its own terms.

It is fascinating to read Gran's book in the context of Edward Said's "Orientalism," the first serious exploration of the origins and development of Western Middle East scholarship.

Europe eventually gained political dominion over much of the Islamic world, and at this point Western scholars began to study Asia in earnest, not for its own sake, but for its potential use to modern Europe.

Orientalists did not bother to study the peoples and cultures of the Middle East as living, comprehensive entities; they merely selected those aspects of Oriental life that fit their intellectual frameworks, constructing an essentially imaginary world that would reinforce the Western colonial impulse.

Western Oriental scholarship, along with other cultural pressures, "tended to make more rigid sense of difference between the European and Asiatic parts of the world," Said says. He goes on to argue that

The political nature of Orientalism reached its full flowering in the late 19th century, when scholars began making substantial con-tributions to European governments' policies on the Middle

This close relationship between academia and government has continued to the present day, with professors providing consulting services to government agencies and officials retiring from government service to take up professorships at various key univer-

The infusion of traditional Orientalism into Western government policy has made it almost impossible for countries like the United States and Britain to understand what is happening in the Middle East today.

Orientalism, in its most classic form, postulates that Islam is incapable of cultural innovation, that the Arab world is stagnant and resistant to change. It is thus tics, contends that the West's view not surprising that American of the "Orient," particularly the policymakers, for example, were caught off guard by the Iranian from any sudden-access to know- revolution, or that the Carter ledge about the region, but rather administration is admittedly baf-from a set of conceptual structures fled by the resurgence of Islam around the world. Western governments would have a far better understanding of low in the footsteps of the " new breed" of Western Middle East scholars, rather than clinging to the tenets of Orientalism.

Consider, for example, the approach followed by Peter Gran in his "Islamic Roots of Capital-

The thesis of Gran's book challenging the long-held theories of Western economists — is that a significant development towards capitalism took place in Egypt between 1760 and 1840.

Gran says he first came to realize something was wrong with the conventional view of modern capitalist development vis-a-vis the Middle East when be read a series of articles by Professor Afaf Lutfi Al-Sayyid Marsot of UCLA in the 1960s.

In the mid-18th century, Egypt underwent an economic and cultural revival, he says. The commercial rebirth was spurred by French interest in Egypt as a source of grain and as a market for finished goods.

As the Egyptian economy revived, a cultural rebirth ensued, ied by the ulema who were anxious to stabilize a society put under

The ulema sponsored a revival of Sufi turuq, or mystical confraternities, and encouraged greater communication among the various socio-economic classes in

A revival of Hadith, or the study of the sayings of the Prophet Muhammad, "in important ways justified the activities of the commercial sector in the eighteenth century," Gran maintains.

Later there was a decline in Hadith studies and a rise in the study of kalam, or speculative theology, which was used to justify the reform policies of Muhammad

After the breakup of Muhammad Ali's reformist bureaucracy, the study of Hadith again returned to its former pre-emment posi-

In essence, Gran found that Egypt had its own indigenous roots for its modern capitalist development. While these indigenous processes interacted thronghout the period with European economic forces, they can in no way be described as foreign imports, Gran concludes.

"I am convinced," he says, that, properly understood, the industrial revolution was a global event, and I question the strong tradition in the West to assume a proprietary relationship to it." Gran's thesis is indeed a bold challenge to conventional Orientalist and economic theory. But this kind of thinking is long overdue, and could go a long way toward opening up the doors of Western academia to objective study of the Middle East.

Oil and the Barrier Reef

By Robert Milliken

SYDNEY — After a series of emarkable disclosures in Parlianent, the Australian government ias been forced to declare a noratorium on oil drilling on one of the world's natural wonders, he Great Barrier Reef.

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser aid there would be no further enewal of oil exploration permits intil completion of "long term esearch" on the effects of drilling. Effectively, this rules out oil driling for another two years, but loes not stop it forever.

Fraser's announcement ended a ughly pressured campaign by the abour Party opposition over the ummer, during which a series of eaked ministerial letters and tape ecordings left the government's redibility on the reef controversy rock bottom. The letters revealed that despite overnment assurances that nothing would be done to damage he reef, some ministers had been naving secret talks with a number of U.S.-based multinational oil ompanies over allowing drilling

o go ahead. The Barrier Reef is a spectacuar area roughly the size of Engand stretching almost the entire ngth of the northern Queensland coast to Papua-New Guinea. In recent years its unique coral reefs and marine life have been threatened by encroaching tourism and offshore traffic in oil tankers from southern Australia.

Lately, however, the main threat has come from the state government of Queensland led by the right wing Jon Bjelke-Petersen, a politician who has never allowed any conservation issues to stand in the way of developing his state's abundant natural resources. (Recently he ended a conservation campaign to save Brisbane's last remaining grand 19th century hotel by sending in bulldozers at midnight to demolish it so a skyscraper could be built.)

No one knows how much oil, if any, is under the Reef's waters. But Bielke-Petersen has been pressuring the federal government in Canberra to renew exploration permits held by an Australian oil company and three subsidiaries of U.S. companies, Texaco, Gulf Oil and California Asiatic.

These permits were suspended in 1971 when a Royal Commission was set up to examine the environmental implications of drilling. Its findings three years later were inconclusive. Then in 1975, Gough Whit-lam's Labour government established the Barrier Reef Authority to safeguard the Reef's interests and gave it power to declare any part of the Reef a marine park, in which case no mining of any sort would ever be allowed.

The authority recently recommended that the large Capricornia section of the Reef be declared a park. But the area contains three of the foreign drilling leases, and the Fraser government immediately intervened to delay the

The uproar of this summer ceutered on a series of bombshell letters between two of Fraser's ministers, Senator Jim Webster and Kevin Newman, which Labor Mps bave produced in Parliament Senator Webster, the Minister for Environment and Science, bas repeatedly asserted that the reason for the delay in declaring the Capricornia section was to sort out "constitutional questions" with Queensland.

But the letters disclosed the opposite - that the government was anxious to allow the oil drilling permits to be renewed first. In one letter, Newman sought Webster's support for a cabinet submission pressing for government approval for oil drilling in Reef waters. — (G)

I can hear you say " all this talk about eating health foods is a lot of bunk. " Such a reaction is typical of the ignorance that surrounds the whole subject of the health food market. POINT ONE... eating health foods does not necessarily mean a diet of nuts, raw vegetables and ice-cold yoghurt. POINT TWO... eating 'naturally' is of obvious benefit to your health. ### Portillo tells Congress

Mexico's oil wealth will modernize nation

MEXOCO CITY, Sept. 21 AP1 - President Jose Lopez Portillo told the Mexican Congress Saturday that his administration will use Mexico's huge new oil wealth to develop industry, agriculture and social welfare to turn the country into a modern nation.

"In just a few months our certified and proven reserves have registered an extraordinary - and to many, incredible - rise," the President said in bis third annual state-of-the-union speech. "Nonetheless, our oil policy is not determined by those figures. but rather by our country's requirements for a unified and sustained development," he said. "let Mexico be reborn into modernity," he added. Lopez Portillo said combined oil and gas reserves rose from 40.1 billion to 45.8 billion barrels in the past seven months, making it "the sixth largest in the world" and assuring Mexico "a supply of oil for the next 60 years, a period that will certainly be extended thanks to the ongoing exploration."

With only one-tenth of potentially oil-bearing areas explored. Mexico already has combined potential reserves of 200 billion barrels. One third of it is natural gas, and the rest crude oil.

"In the last ten years the world had discovered no new so-called giant oil fields. In our three years in office, Mexico has discovered three major fields, Lopez Portillo

The Presideot said Mexico has emerged out of the worst economic crisis since World War II and the growth rate this year will be about 7.5 per cent - four times greater than three years ago. However, he warned that inflamate inflation will be between 13 and 14 per cent this year. Lopez portillo said the growth rate of 7.5 per cent for this year "although insufficient in itself, constitutes a precondition for resolving pressing problems, such as unemployment.

"The fact that we have an abundance of oil in a world that is economically disorganized and avid for energy sources puts us in an excellent posicion to advance our economie and social growth in an independent and self-sustained way," said Lopez Portillo.

"For the first and perhaps only time in our history we have the possibility of designing a nadonal pattern that is both feasible and consistent with the standards of our most ambitious political philosophy," he said.

However, Lopez Portillo warned that despite substantial improvements, "it will take at least 20 years — for Mexicans — to realize its full potential."

Meanwhile, the Mexican President accused foreign and Mexican news media Saturday of distorting reports of a buge oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico that has been fouling beaches in southern Texas. Behind all this an aberrant international structure bas been raised," the President told Congress in his third annual state-of-the union message. "The information that is gathered in our developing countries and that is channeled back to us is managed by others," he said of the reporting of the oil spill done by foreign media.

U.S. rice exports to Gulf increasing

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 -U.S. exports of rice to the countries of the Arabian Gulf are expected to continue to rise rapidly over the coming year, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The department, in its latest forecast for agricultural exports, said increased rice shipments are predicted for Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq and the United Arab Emirates during fiscal year 1980.

The U.S. exported an estimated 880,000 metric tons of rice to the Middle East (excluding North Africa) during fiscal year 1979, the department said. The shipmeots, worth $ 400 million, represented a 33 per cent increase over 1978.

Iran, prior to the February revolution, was America's largest Gulf customer for rice exports.

Saudi Arabia is a close second. Wheat and flour exports to the Middle East are also expected to climb in 1980 - by about teo percent - follwoing a slight decline in volume during 1979. The U.S. exported 2.6 million metric tons of wheat and flour to the region in 1979, compared to 2.9 million tons io 1978.

The Agriculture Department also predicted a ten per cent increase in feed grain exports to the Viddle East in the coming

Feed grain shipments to the region increased marginally in 1979 over the previous year, it added. Exports to the Middle East were 1.6 million metric tons last year compared with 1.55 million tons

It predicted that the export volume of major bulk commodities would exceed 145 million metric tons, compared with 128 million in 1979.

The increase should give the U.S. an agricultural surplus for 1980 of some $ 20 billion - a 25 per cent jump over the previous

Past fears but no future hopes

Present U.K. economic trend seen as boring

LONDON, Sept. 2 -Economic policy in the UK is passing through a boring and difficult phase, one which produces nothing now in exchange for the hope that things may improve later on. It's inevitable in circumstances like these that mutterings should break out in the ranks and that the Prime Vinister should be in receipt of a good deal of conflicting advice which has one common theme, namely that she should desist from some of ber more stringent policies.

· Of course some of the muttering is justified in the sense that the made are real and not imaginary. It is justified because squeezing down inflatiooary expectations as the business cycle tips over, following a period when too great an injection of inflationary demand has just been fed in the system, cannot be other than treacherously difficult and painful.

This is to be seen in the argument that the current monetary stance could turn out to be far too restrictive and if the authorities aren't careful they could engineer a collapse in asset values similar to that which occurred in 1974-75.

SEOUL, KOREA, TO MR. JEA HYUN LEE, HAS BEEN LOST.

The whole story isn't to be found in just the statistical monetary picture. Confidence itself is of prime importance. The collapse in financial values which occurred in 1974 was precipitated by a number of factors. The most important was perhaps the widespread fear that Labor has 'gone round the twist."

The institutions behaved very irrationally and it was this which pushed the market down to absurdly low levels. There was a failure of collective nerve. This time round we just don't see it bappening like that Even if oney squeeze is very tight institutional cash flow should be sufficient to mop up the government deht which is offered. And the amount of new issues being brought to the market from the private sector will be tiny. What the critics are getting at, of course, is that the corporate sector will be squeezed by the monetary restraint. And that companies will go bust and that earnings and dividends will be put under pressure. But even if this happens, the institutions will be unlikely to sell the shares because they will know that these unpleasent events are

David moves on Cuba as Florida gets ready

NASSAU, Bahamas Sept. 2 (AP) — Hur-ricane David headed for the Bahamas and South Florida on Sunday, slowly regaining some of the strength it lost as it plowed across the Caribbean, killing at least 84 people. Hurricane warnings were in effect for the Bahamas from Landros and New Providence Islands southward, while a hurricane watch was in effect for Bimini, Grand Bahama and Forecasters for the National Hurricane Center in Miami continued a hurricane watch for Southern Florida and said hurricane warnings probably would be issued for an area from Palm Beach south though the Florida Keys to the Dry Turtugas later Sunday. The governor urged people to evacuate the Florida Keys.

Forecasts said David's winds had dropped to about 75 miles per bour when it crossed the mountains of Hispaniola on Saturday but that the storm was growing stronger as it maved over the open sea.

"The situation is getting much worse all the time," said Sir Etienne Dupuch, publisher of the Nassau Tribune.

"The winds are high and the seas are rough, but there's been no damage to the waterfront..." be said, "Everyone is battening down and everybody is prepared for it. There are bundreds of sport boats bere, and oo the waterfroot, everybody was busy late last night getting them out of the water and moving them inland." In Miami, Hurricane Forecaster Jim Gross said: "it's now out over open water about 350 miles southeast of Miami and we expect it to be gaining strength. We expect it will have winds between 95 and 100 miles per hour when it makes landfall (in Florida), hut we don't have a firm feel yet of where that will

At 1000 GMT, David's center was located near latitude 22.5 north, longitude 76.2 west, a position off the northern coast of eastern Cuba. It was moving northwest at 10 to 12 miles per bour.

David's circulation was becoming better were estimated at 75 miles per hour. Gales extended 150 miles north of the center and 100 miles to the south and were affecting several of the Lower Bahamas Islands.

Gross noted David had lost much of the intensity it had when it ripped into Dominica with 150 mile per hour winds on Wednesday, killing 22 and devastating the tiny island's banana crop. The storm then skirted Puerto Rico, leaving 16 dead, and slashed across the Dominican Republic, where at least 46 died. before its winds dropped to about 75 miles

Preparations continued all over South Florida though officials in Key West said despite a request by Gov. Bob Graham for voluntary evacuation.

David had not been expected to hit Santo Domingo in force, but late Friday it suddenly turned north and for four hours ravaged the city of nearly one million residents. Many people were killed and injured. Officials said several people were killed in the capital and in Santiago, 96 miles to the north 13 were missing, and many areas of the country had not been heard from.

President Antonio Guzman declared a state of emergency and asked for Organization of American States assistance to help the oation recover. Losses were estimated in the

The Haitian capital, Port-Au-Prince, protected by mountains, felt no effects of the storm, resideots said. In Cap Hatien, to the north, only slight damage was reported as the storm headed to sea.

In Havana, a Cuban official said storm warnings were issued for the eastern coast, Civil defense authorities had not decided whether to mobilize,

"We are keeping a close eye on the progress of the storm," the official told reporters at a meeting of the nonaligned nations con-

Meanwhile, about 500 miles southeast of the Caribbean, in the South Atlantic, Federic was upgraded from a tropical storm to a burricane as it headed west. In the Gulf of Mexico, tropical storm Elena moved in an erratic west-northwest path, but forecasters declined to speculate if the storm would reach the Texas shore, 140 miles away.

In Santo Domingo, David's winds from 55 to 120 miles per hour uprooted trees, snapped utility poles and littered rain-swamped streets with the rubble of fragile island

"Everything is destroyed," said one reporter who left shelter and examined Santo Domingo. Houses were flattened, power lines lay like tangled spaghetti and people were dazed.

island were cut by the storm, hut the government had cut off electricity as a precautionary measure and berded residents into shelters to wait out the worst of the burricane. In Florida, hardware stores, supermarkets and the few open gas stations were crowded

Saturday as residents of Southern Florida menaced by the approach of David, prepared for the worst. Visitors on the Florida Keys immediately began evacuating the islands, The last major hurricane to hit Southern Florida was Betsy in 1965. That storm killed 75 persons and caused $1.4 billion in damage in Florida and Louisiana.

STORM TIDE: Waves driven by Hurricane David batter beach homes near Ponce, Puerto Rico's second largest city, Thursday as the killer storm passed south of the island. Residents of Florida and the Bahamas have been alerted to prepared for evacuation as David appro-

IRA issues new threats against Britain

DUBLIN, Sept. 2 (AP) - The Irish Republican Army was reported Saturday to preparing further attacks on "prestige targets" like the assassination of Lord Mountbatten last Monday. The Irish Times published an interview with an unnamed man described as a spokesman for the IRA Provisional Wing which had claimed responsibility for Mount batten's killing.

He specifically mentioned as possible future IRA targets for slaying former Prime Minister James Callaghan and Peter Jay, former British ambassador to Washington.

Wait and see if Peter Jay and Jim Callaghan return to their holiday cottage in County Cork next summer," the man was quoted as saying. "Don't forget we regard this country as one unit," he added.

British unions ready fight on Thatcher policy

BLACKPOOL, England, Sept. 2 (R) — Britain's powerful trade unions meet here Monday to decide how tough to be in opposing what they see as the new Conservative government's anti-union policies. If delegates to the annual week-long Trades Union Congress (TUC) meeting in this northwest England seaside resort call for all-out war, it could mean another winter of crippling strikes.

It could also mean, in the government's view, a further deterioration of Britain's ability to compete in an increasingly sluggish world economy.

The TUC will formulate its stance on government proposals to cut spending, and jobs, in public services and to outlaw secondary picketing, in which striking workers picket firms not directly involved in their own labor

The government also wants to prevent "closed shops", in which all workers at a firm must be union members, and require secret postal ballots for union strike decisions.

sion must bave been really dramatic, as she repeated the request louder. I tried to throw her off by saying, importantly, that bere I was trying to solve the problems of the planet while all she could think of was a bedtime story. Yesterday, I discovered I had to add another item to the growing list of skills I sorely lack: story-telling to children.

My wife had left to spend the evening with relatives. I stayed behind pleading a deadline for an article I was working on — something about the perrenial crisis in the Middle East

No sooner had I settled down to my papers than my little daughter appeared in her nightgown, demanding a story before she could go to sleep, My look of incomprehen-

I sat beside her. Looks were exchanged; she expectantly, I blankly. I was young once, a long long time ago, and had gone through all the childhood stories available then. The Brothers Grimm, the Arab tales of romance and adventure such as Antar the Black Prince, Al Zeer Abu Leila and countless others. All these I must bave known by heart then. But now, nothing. After some moments the sileoce became too ebarged, expectation was visibily and quickly changing into impati-eoce. I had to say something. The only thing I could think of was my abandoned article. "Do you want to hear something about the ups and downs of peace in the Middle East?" "Yes," she said. "Is it anything to do with snakes and ladders?" It took me a while to understand the connec

As it dawned on me, she was off on her own line of thought. "Has any one fallen of a ladder there?" I said, "Yes, someone most certainly did. What's more he is still falling. He still hasn't reached the ground." "Who?" she demanded. "Him", I replied stubbornly, "By the way," I said, as I saw this was leading nowhere," Have you heard of Mr. Smith who fell from the tenth floor? As he passed the sixth floor he said, 'so far, so good.'!" "Silly story." she said, "Snakes and ladders and people who keep on falling. Tell me another one." Too true, I thought to myself. I have oever heard of a sillier story.

Silence and expectant looks once more. "Listen," I said, "shall I tell you about the nationalization of the Egyptian press. This is also a true story." Hope lighted her eyes again. "Yes, do." "Well." I began, "four leading journalists told me exactly how that came about. Except each had a completely different story." "Which was the true one?" she asked. "No one knows," I replied." except perhaps the little bird who took the whole thing down in writing?" "A bird?" she asked mystified. "Is this to be a story of little and bad pussy cats?" "It is indeed." I said. "All those who attended the meeting were pussy cats, with the exception of the president, of course..."

I woke up to angry cries from my wife who had just come in. On the bed beside me my little daughter was wide awake, but covered with remnants of fruit and other kinds of food. It seems that she decided to give herself a party, having giveo up hope of waking me up, let alone of hearing more stories. The last thing I heard as I rushed into my studies was my little girl's piercing voice telling my wife in accusing tones, "all he knows are silly stories about snakes and ladders and cats and birds." ### Possible new moon sighted Pioneer survives Saturn's rings

MOUNTAIN VIEW, California, Sept. 2 (Agencies) - Trailhlazing Pioneer 11 survived two perilous erossings through debris making up the rings around the giant planet Saturn on Saturday, then delighted scientists with evidence of a previously unsuspected ring and a possible new moon.

A picture and data from the little spacecraft convinced researchers that" about 2,200 miles outside the edge of the (famous visible) rings there is another oarrow ring that was discovered by Pioneer, " said Larry Esposito of the University of Colorado. Imaging team leader Thomas Gehrels of the University of Arizona revealed the discovery nf what may be an addition to Saturn's family of 10 known moons. The body, estimated at about 120 miles in diameter, is just beyond the rings, he said. Gehrels said it is either the known moon

Andrew Ingersoll of the California Institute of Technology said the instruments crammed into the little spaceship were returning a wealth of raw data that was just Scientists at the space mission control center here reported at least two " hits" by particles which, they said, knocked out tiny meteorite detector cells.

They said the collisions were with particles half the width of a human hair as the spacecraft raced toward Saturn at 71,000 miles an
